My name is Denise Caroleo and I reside at 101 Spratt Avenue in Staten Island, NY. I am the wife of Blaise Caroleo and have been for the last 40 years. My husband and I have been together since we were 14 years old, married at 17, and together we raised 4 children, all of whom are upstanding and law abiding citizens. I can honestly say that I know Blaise better than anyone else, and despite the allegations against him I will continue to stand by him.

While we had our share of problems due to being married so young, we were always able to work them out for the sake of our children. Blaise has taken good care of our family throughout the years, as well as any of his own family and friends who were in need. I have seen him pull over on the side of the road to help a total stranger with a flat tire. Although I understand how the charges against him must make him appear, this isolated incident does not describe his person as a whole.

I have seen firsthand the harsh family life that Blaise came from, and know that he always aspired to be better than his upbringing. However, a lifetime of trauma, combined with a traumatic brain injury suffered years prior and depression due to losing his job created the darkness through which he acted. I understand that this is not an excuse for those actions.

The impact of this case has been devastating on my husband's life. Due to the implications of these allegations, he has lost his freedom, all of his friends, and most of his family, including the support of all of our children. His suffering has been immense. My support is the strongest resource that my husband still has, and so I feel it is my duty to ask the court to consider my request for leniency in his sentencing.

Respectfully,

Denise Caroleo
